About the Brand

Launched in 2012 by artist Olafur Eliasson and engineer Frederik Ottesen at London's Tate Modern, Little Sun's social business brings clean, reliable, affordable energy to the 1.1 billion people in the world living without electricity while raising awareness for energy access and climate action worldwide. Each time you buy a Little Sun, they deliver one to someone living off-the-grid at a much lower, locally affordable price. On the ground, mainly in Sub-Saharan Africa, they work with local entrepreneurs to create local jobs and to bring the power of the sun to everyone.

In 2017, Olafur Eliasson launched the Little Sun Foundation as an extension to the social business. The Foundation delivers light to those beyond the reach of entrepreneurial distribution channels, especially school children, refugees and people affected by natural disaster.
